

Mohamed — Hospital Visit Volunteer

“Volunet gave me the opportunity to become part of meaningful hospital visit programs that truly changed the way I see volunteering and community support. Through the platform, I joined a group of volunteers who regularly visited children and elderly patients to spend time with them, offer emotional support, and create moments of comfort during difficult periods in their lives. We organized small activities, conversations, reading sessions, and simple entertainment that helped bring positivity into the hospital environment.

The experience taught me that volunteering is not only about providing material help, but also about being present for people who may feel isolated or forgotten. Seeing patients smile, laugh, or simply enjoy a conversation made me realize how powerful human connection can be. I also developed important personal skills such as communication, patience, teamwork, and empathy.

What I appreciated most about Volunet was how easy it made the entire process. I was able to discover opportunities, connect with organizers, and join initiatives that matched my interests and availability. The platform introduced me to inspiring people who genuinely care about helping others and making a positive difference in society. Thanks to Volunet, volunteering became an important part of my life, and I now encourage more young people to get involved in community work and humanitarian activities.”
